

ADDRESS.

IN submitting to their subscribers this edition of the History, Topography, and Directory of East Yorkshire, the Proprietors trust that the arrangement and treatment of the matter will meet with general approval. The compilation of such a work necessarily occupies a considerable length of time, during which many changes take place, but the Editors have endeavoured to keep themselves au fait with what was passing, and to secure the latest and most accurate information, each town and parish was personally re-visited and revised whilst the sheets were in the press.

In the arrangement the New Parliamentary Divisions have been adopted, instead of the old and nearly obsolete Wapentakes; and the parishes in each follow in alphabetical order. A copious index will still further facilitate reference.

Of the plan and scope of the work little need be said. The East Riding is first viewed as a whole, and a rèsumè of its history is given. This is followed by a sketch of its physical features, soil and agriculture; and its judicial and ecclesiastical polity and divisions. Each parish is next passed in review, and whatever there may be of interest attaching to it is related.

The desire of the Proprietors has been to produce a thoroughly reliable and trustworthy book of reference, and they can assure their patrons that no efforts have been spared on their part to secure this important and essential feature. A few errors may possibly have escaped detection, but the Editors are confident that in completeness and accuracy this History and Directory of East Yorkshire will compare favourably with any hitherto published.

In conclusion the Proprietors tender their sincere thanks to their numerous subscribers, and also to those clergymen and gentlemen who have assisted in the compilation. Their acknowledgments are especially due to Mr. Tindall Wildridge for his comprehensive account of Beverley, and to Mr. E. Wigglesworth for his historical and descriptive sketch of Hull. Lastly they thank the inhabitants of the East Riding generally for the courteous reception of the agents appointed to collect the information.

T. BULMER & Co.
