

WHEN JOSHUA LORD CAME OF AGE.

JOLLY times these when a young man reaches 21 years of age, and treats his circle of friends handsomely. This happened when the eldest son of the landlord of the Roebuck Inn, Portsmouth, who is well known and much respected in the neighbourhood, invited his numerous friends, when he was just reaching 21, to come and see him do it; and ladies and gentlemen to the number of over 150 accepted his invitation. The clatter of the cups and saucers when they sat down to tea was charming, and as early as possible afterwards preparations were made for a lengthy and varied programme. Mr. Joe Hunt, of Bacup, officiated as Master of Ceremonies, and under his genial superintendence the evening's proceedings were very much enjoyed. Dancing was a principal feature, but other items served to make matters interesting. Miss Alice Lord, of Gothic Villa, Newchurch-in-Rosendale, recited Rudyard Kipling's famous poem, "The Absent-minded Beggar," during which a collection was made, and the receipts, which realised £1 3s. 6½d., were forwarded to the local War Relief Fund. Songs were rendered by Miss Lord, Miss Banks, Miss Settle, Mr. T. Gaukrodger (Bacup), Mr. G. H. Holt (Bacup), Mr. Joe Hunt (Bacup), and Master R. Holt. A stump speech by Mr. Gaukrodger was immensely enjoyed, for he gave it well, and the proceedings were kept up with unflagging interest until eleven o'clock, when the usual votes of thanks were accorded. Then Mr. Joshua Lord made his maiden speech. We may add that the presents to Mr. Lord were many and valuable, one from his intimate companions, a writing case, being greatly admired. May he live to see the 3rd of February many, many times!

★ PIGEON MATCH.

MR. J. MARSHALL, of the "Peeping Tom" beer-house, and Mr. H. Newell, of Lineholme, have many friends who, like themselves, are fond of pigeon pie, so on a certain Saturday, that has now disappeared into the past, Mr. M. said his pigeon could fly better than one that Mr. N. was given to talk of with all the bias of proprietary rights. The two birds were let loose, one at the "Jockey" tavern, the other at Carr's-road, and instructions were given to them both to get to the other end of the mile course as soon as possible, and not to loiter about looking into the shop windows; further, that the owner of the bird that did not win, having agreed to stand the pigeon-pie supper, which so many like the taste of (as aforesaid!) it was just possible that the losing bird might find himself inside that pie! Whether this made Mr. Newell's bird nervous we cannot say, but it is a fact that Mr. Marshall's bird, a knowing bird that, nodded a saucy nod, and winked a wicked wink, when he was thrown up, and made for the other end in good form, doing the mile in 2m. 2s., while his unfortunate competitor, who being slower-witted, stopped to think, made an awful mess of it, arriving 5m. 11s. later, he having mistaken it for a go-as-you-please race, and probably, therefore, walked most of the way.

WHEN A MAN DIES WITHOUT LEAVING A WILL, HOW IS HIS PROPERTY DIVIDED?

The following are the Rules by which the Personal Estates of English Persons, and the Movable Estates of Scotch Persons dying without leaving a will, are distributed. No nearer relations are supposed to exist than those named. Where an asterisk () is prefixed the regulation applies only to Scotland.*

It is to be observed that by the Intestates Estates Act (53 and 54 Vict. c. 29) a very important alteration has been made in the law as regards provisions for widows of men who die intestate, and without issue, after 1st September, 1890: it is enacted that if the real and personal estate together do not exceed £500, the whole is to go to the widow; if it exceeds £500, the widow is to have a charge on both proportionately for £500. The provision is to be in addition to her share of the residue. This does not apply to Scotland.

If the Intestate die, leaving

If the Intestate die, leaving	His representatives take in the proportion following:—
Wife only, no blood relations	Half to wife, other half to the Crown.
Wife, no near relations	Half to wife, rest to next-of-kin in equal degree to intestate, or their legal representatives.
Wife and child, or children, and children of a deceased child	One-third to wife, rest to child or children; and if children are dead, then to the representatives (that is, their lineal descendants).
